

This snowpit was dug on an east facing, 35 degree slope at 9,000 feet. The break occured 20 cm down on lower density stellars crystals that fell two days ago. I do not anticipate this weakness to last more than a few days. Photo: GNFAC

Advisory Region Southern Madison

Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Wed Mar 23, 2011 Southern Madison, 2011-03-22